Joy to the World

Neither poet nor composer knew he was writing a Christmas carol

Of the statues in Westminster Abbey one is of Isaac Watts—frail, sickly, gentle-mannered literary genius of the early 18th century. Another is of George Frederick Handel—massive, robust and hot-tempered master of the keyboard and opera. Both men lived in London; both knew each other. But neither suspected that their talents would be combined to produce one of the greatest of Christmas carols.

It was in 1719 that pockmarked five-foot Isaac Watts wrote a hymn based on the 98th Psalm. He was 45 years old and had written, among 600 other notable hymns, "Alas, And Did My Saviour Bleed," "O God, Our Help in Ages Past" and "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross." But the little bachelor's health had broken while he was preaching at London's Mark Lane Church and Lord Mayor Abney carried him out to his estate for a week's rest. That was in 1712 and he was still there seven years later writing children's verse, hymns and books on a dozen subjects.

Twenty-two years after Watts wrote his hymn on the 98th Psalm and published it in his "Psalm of David Imitated" a big fat theatrical producer knelt in prayer in another part of London. He was George Frederick Handel and he had written some of the world's greatest operas. As a boy in Germany Handel had persuaded his father to let him study music instead of law and wound up playing a church organ in England. And when George Handel later cast his talents with the theater he carried his religious training with him. At 56 Handel wanted to do something really big. And he did. In 1741 he worked and prayed almost continuously for 23 days and nights and came up with his immortal "The Messiah." It was such a masterpiece that for centuries the piece has been drawn on as the basis for numerous compositions.

Little Isaac Watts died on the Abney Estates in 1748 after his visit of "a week" lasted 36 years. He was buried in Sunhill Fields but a statue of him was placed in Westminster Abbey. Eleven years later big George Handel was laid to rest in the Poets' Corner of the Abbey where a statue stands to the memory of the theatrical genius who never forgot God.

It was in 1836 that Boston's choir director-composer Lowell Mason rearranged a portion of Handel's "Messiah" to fit the hymn Isaac Watts wrote in 1719. And so, while the big statue and the little statue stand in Westminster Abbey as mute reminders of two geniuses in their respective fields, tribute is paid both every Christmas to the resounding echoes of...

Joy to the world! The Lord is come;
Let earth receive her King
Let every heart prepare Him room
And heaven and nature sing.

Joy to the world! The Savior reigns;
Let men their songs employ;
While fields and floods, rocks, hills and plains
Repeat the sounding joy.

No more let sins and sorrows grow
Nor thorns infest the ground;
He comes to make His blessings flow
Far as the curse is found.

He rules the world with truth and grace,
And makes the nations prove
The glories of His righteousness
And wonders of His love.

Confident Living

By DR. NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

How To Take Things As They Come

THE personal philosophy of the late Henry Ford has always made a great impression upon me. He was a successful businessman, but, what is more important, he was a successful human being.

On one occasion, a friend of mine interviewed him and asked him to sum up his philosophy of life. Mr. Ford thought for a few moments and then answered: "I have a few simple rules, for I am essentially a simple man. First, I do not eat too much. Second, I do not worry too much. Third, I put my faith in God and do my best and believe that whatever happens happens for the best."

The same relaxed philosophy was echoed by a distinguished magazine editor when he said: "I plan well. I work hard. I try to leave nothing to chance. I pray about things. Then, if someone disappoints me or if something goes wrong and things don't work out the way I wish, I take a philosophical attitude toward it because I have done all I can do about it and I don't let it worry me."

These two men I have quoted were putting into words one of the most important of all personal skills — the ability to take things as they come and not let them throw you.

IF YOU WANT to live a serene, happy, calm, effective and useful life, you will need to master this skill. Every one of us must be able to take whatever comes, do all we can about it and meet it calmly and intelligently.

A famous psychiatrist once told me that he thinks one of the wisest statements ever made about nature at its best and strongest was that of St. Paul, when he said, "having done all, to stand."

How sensible that is. When you have done all you can do, what more can you do? The worst thing is to fret and fume and wonder and become panicky. The best is to just stand and hold steady.

The statements made by Henry Ford, the magazine editor and the psychiatrist teach a technique that was first outlined in the wisest of all books. I firmly believe that the Bible has an answer to every human problem.

Take this question of taking things as they come. In addition to the words of St. Paul which the psychiatrist quoted, you can find this other statement in the Bible: "I have learned, in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content."

Now that is merely another way of saying: "I have learned how to take things as they come and not get myself in a stew or in an ineffective dither."

There's no getting away from trouble. But the law of averages is fairly comforting. It means that over a long period of time, you will get your share but no more. Some people seem to have more troubles than others, but eventually it all averages up.

PEOPLE OFTEN ASK "Why did this happen to me?" I usually tell them, that it's because they're a member of the human race. Such things happen to human beings and you have to adjust yourself to the vicissitudes of human life.

You can't always win. You can't always get what you want. In fact, you can't always live. There must always come a time when you have to face difficulties and some cold, hard facts. And it is a very, very great thing for you if, before this happens to you, you have managed to learn the marvelous skill of being content in whatsoever state you may find yourself.

That's the purpose of churches and ministers and religion in general. They exist to teach you how to gain strength to face up to your difficulties and take them as they come. The Bible, gives you deep sources of philosophical understanding. And in faith in God, you have a shield which will always save you from harm.

If you will use your Bible and keep your faith, you can stand against whatever comes.

Europe Lagging On NATO Cost

Eisenhower Seeks To Secure More Money For Army
PARIS (AP)—General Dwight D. Eisenhower fought in person today to stave off a threatening rebellion of North Atlantic Treaty Organization countries against the growing cost of paying for his international army.

A 22-man temporary committee, headed by U. S. Mutual Security Administrator Averell Harriman, has drafted a secret 100-page report calling for major increases in defense spending by eight of the 12 NATO nations.

Eisenhower went before the committee today reportedly to "lay it on the line" that European security is in danger unless the proposed hikes in arms spending are forthcoming.

Some of the eight countries, notably Belgium, have indignantly rejected the committee's recommendations to provide more guns, and others are believed revolting against increases.

The NATO supreme commander took with him to the committee session his chief of staff, Lt. Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther. Gruenther appeared before the full NATO council of foreign, defense and finance ministers in Rome last month with charts, facts, and figures, to present the military assessment of what the Allied army needs to make Europe safe.

Eisenhower began dealing himself in on the labors of the NATO financiers yesterday when he went to see French Premier Rene Pleven. He later said they discussed "The French position in NATO."

The general is believed to have urged Pleven to prod his government into meeting the NATO committee's request for a 5 per cent hike in French defense spending.

France already has budgeted a record $55 billion francs ($2,710,000,000) for arms in 1952.

One trainman was killed and three injured last night as the climax to a hurtling ride on the Duluth, South Shore and Atlantic line freight.

The 22-car train, pulled by a diesel engine, had been heading up a sharp grade near the upper peninsula village of Herman when the brakes on a steam pusher engine suddenly failed.

The rocking string of heavy cars, loaded with logs, picked up speed as it shot down hill. Police estimated the train was going as much as 70 miles an hour when it hit a sharp curve near the L'Anse depot.

There was a roar like a throng of thunderclaps as all 22 cars crashed off the tracks.

The fireman on the pusher engine, James B. Bennett of Marquette, Mich., was killed.

His three fellow crewmen were injured, suffering severely from shock as a result of the harrowing ride.

Killjoy Neighbors Halt Playful Bear's Snow Fun
COLUMBUS (AP)—Joe, a three-year-old bear, went out to play in the snow yesterday and had an exciting time.

He climbed trees, jumped fences and rolled in the snow—but the neighbors didn't understand. They called police.

Three officers chased Joe. They fired their guns in the air. The 400-pound bear hid in a chicken house and wouldn't come out.

Finally Edward Davis, 18, came along. He is the son of Johnnie Davis of Columbus, who keeps Joe as a pet in his commercial garage.

Young Davis saw the policemen standing around with guns in their hands. He walked into the coop and led Joe out by a chain.

Davis said Joe is so tame, a child could feed him.

Psychologist Guilty Of Morals Offenses
SEATTLE (AP)—A stunned Seattle consulting psychologist heard a jury declare last night he was guilty of morals offenses against three of his women patients.

The psychologist, Dr. Louis Gellermann, 50, waited nearly eight hours for the verdict which he apparently felt would clear him completely of charges discussed in two weeks of lurid and spicy testimony by his former patients in a superior court trial here.

The psychologist faces total maximum sentences of 16 years on the three counts. Sentences will be pronounced later.

Marie Wilson Married To Television Producer
SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP)—Actress Marie Wilson and television producer Robert Fallon were married here last night and today were honeymooning at Carmel, farther up the coast.

The ceremony was performed in a hotel by Dr. Berkeley Blake, pastor of the First Unitarian Church. A reception for relatives and close friends followed.

It was Fallon's first marriage, Miss Wilson's second.

1 Killed As Freight Runs Wild Down Hill
L'ANSE, Mich. (AP)—A freight train ran wild backwards for nine miles down a steep hill until it shot off the tracks on a curve.

One trainman was killed and three injured last night as the climax to a hurtling ride on the Duluth, South Shore and Atlantic line freight.

The 22-car train, pulled by a diesel engine, had been heading up a sharp grade near the upper peninsula village of Herman when the brakes on a steam pusher engine suddenly failed.

7 STUDENTS OVERCOME CHESAPEAKE
CHESAPEAKE, O. (AP)—Seven Chesapeake high school students nearly were overcome by gas fumes yesterday from a stove in the manual training building, separate from the school. Principal Harvey Butcher said none was in critical condition.

Any egg stains or stains from egg dishes such as deviled eggs should be soaked in cold water, then scraped off with a knife, wash, then, in hot soapsuds.

JOHN STEWART SERVICE, one of the first writers of Senator McCarthy's wild-swinging attack on the State Department, finally has lost his struggle to stay in the government.

It should be noted, however, that his dismissal by the State Department after an unfavorable ruling by the top loyalty review board is not on the grounds which Senator McCarthy tried to establish. Mr. Service, who became the most viewed and reviewed employee of the federal government, finally was dismissed because the final reviewing left doubts about his loyalty.

The doubts, on the basis of his record, are related only remotely if at all to any possible connection with the Communist Conspiracy. They are related directly, on the other hand, to things which Mr. Service did and said that were not consistent with what he was supposed to do and say as an employee of the State Department.

It was a plain case of disagreement with departmental policy. At times Mr. Service was on the borderline of insubordination; he would have been fired on the spot had he been working for a private employer. In a word, he took into his own hands responsibility for doing things which would not have been tolerated in a strong and well-disciplined Department of State.

One of the hottest issues of the day is foreign policy. But it is not policy so much as the absence of policy which should be made the issue. Under Franklin D. Roosevelt and Harry Truman the foreign affairs of the United States have been at the tender mercies of a State Department whose right hand did not know what the time was on the left hand. Mr. Service happened to be one of the left hands. So he was cut off.

How People Make A Living

IT IS often that a new industrial plant the size of U.S. Steel's $400,000,000 steel works at Morrisville, Pa., is developed as a single project. This makes it an ideal case study in business enterprise.

Benjamin F. Fairless, president of U.S. Steel, told an audience at Chester, Pa., on Thursday what it means in terms of work for other business enterprises.

Two hundred prime contractors are building the plant, which includes everything from blast furnaces to a 150-bed hospital, with streets, automobile devices, housing and bus lines thrown in. The 200 prime contractors are doing business with some 2,000 subcontractors, and each of these has at least one more subcontractor—a total of about 4,000 firms working on the new plant.

Thought only 7,000 men are working in and about Morrisville, at least 3,000,000 are affected by the job. The great majority of them work for small enterprises—less than 500 employees. And the firms they work for use materials and services from about 130,000 other enterprises.

Bank Town is supposed to have surmised that residents of a small town with no industry must make their living by taking in each other's washings. The Morrisville plan of U.S. Steel is a dramatic illustration of how things are made when industry takes over.

Neither Guns Nor Butter

UNEMPLOYMENT in Detroit had reached 10 per cent of the work force a month ago and has continued to rise. One good guess is that by next spring 134,000 persons will have been turned out of jobs in the "arsenal of production."

Government restrictions on materials for auto building and public inability to buy even the reduced production of auto factories are the principal cause of the unemployment. Because Detroit's experiences are usually typical of those of industry generally, they need to be understood.

For example, Detroit is not choosing between guns and butter. Nor is it, as Defense Mobilizer Wilson has been saying, living in a situation in which both guns and butter will be forthcoming. It is, rather, in a situation in which neither guns nor butter will be forthcoming for thousands of Detroit workers. Many of the three billion dollars' worth of war contracts which eventually will be executed by the major auto companies will be executed by the same workers.

There is a mass exodus of jobless workers from the Detroit area. Auto companies will be lucky if they can find enough skilled workers to man their war production assembly lines next year when the lines are ready.

Difficulties, according to a scientist, began seventy centuries ago. Civilization, did it?

The unsuccessful man can offer them the lightest training around the world, says the scientist. He wants up-looking in order.

Competition

By PAUL G. HOFFMAN

Key To Productivity, Former ECA Heads Says

DURING the past six months I have made three visits to Europe. I am deeply concerned about the situation as I have found it. We cannot blind ourselves to the fact that the increased allocation of resources to defense—essential as it is, to deal with the situation as it is, is putting the European economies under a great strain.

I am equally concerned about the terrific strain which these same conditions are placing upon our own economy.

If the European countries and the United States are to meet the problems growing out of the defense programs, we both must quickly achieve greatly expanded production. In view of the high level of employment which exists throughout most of the free world, this increased production can be achieved only through higher productivity—higher output per man hour.

While present emergency conditions give a special urgency to our need for increasing productivity, we would find it necessary to achieve it even if the free world were not faced with the need for rearming in order to prevent Communist aggression. The Communist threat is very much in our minds.

BUT THERE is another fact of life that is even more pervasive, one that we must wrap our minds around—the determination of men everywhere to better themselves.

We see this in societies that are relatively prosperous. We see it among long-dwelling peoples of the earth, who are today in ferment. The Kremlin did not create this urge for a better life, although it exploits it as a means for gaining acceptance of its own program of enslavement.

If our free economies are to survive, they must prove that they can offer to the people not only the dignity for the individual that can come only with freedom, but also an expanding opportunity to live in decency and comfort.

I believe that the free economic system here in the United States is giving a convincing demonstration of its capacity to serve all men well. Furthermore, the benefits accruing from our system have been steadily increasing. This is, of course, largely the result of the spectacular increase in industrial and agricultural productivity that has been taking place in the last half century.

The increases in productivity in the European countries in the last 50 years are not of the same dimensions as those that have taken place here. In fact, today industrial output per man hour in the United States is more than 2 1/2 times that of Western Europe, whereas there was little difference in 1900.

THERE ARE MANY good reasons why this is so. Europe has felt the full brunt of two World Wars. America has some advantages in the way of natural resources. We also have advantages accruing from a large single market.

But these advantages alone do not account for the disparity between European productivity and American productivity. They do not account for the fact that the United States produces one-third of the world's goods and one-half of the world's manufactured goods with one-fifth of the world's people, one-fifth of its natural resources.

If we are going to find the real explanation we will have to look beyond the physical to the psychological factors.

The answer, in my opinion, lies in the fact that conditions in the United States have forced the managers to engage constantly in hard, purposeful thinking. Now thinking is a painful process; it is one of the most unpleasant forms of human effort. Most of us think hard only when forced to do so.

American businessmen dislike thinking as intensely as anyone else. The fact that they do think hard about how to turn out better goods at lower cost, about how to raise wages and offer lower prices to consumers, has been due to pressures generated by this economic system of ours.

One pressure comes from the strong incentives that have been part of our system. There have been rich rewards to the individual who has been able and willing to think creatively.

A pressure of a different type lies in the penalties that befall the business manager who either cannot or will not think creatively. He is very apt to go broke, because in this highly competitive system of ours the only security for the individual lies in a continuing forward march.

There is no denying that this combination of pressures makes for a rugged life for business executives. But most American businessmen have had to compete and compete successfully if they wanted to live.

It is an historical fact that while Europeans were going one way, toward the limitation of competition, we were going the other way, keeping free sharp and painful. It is not for us Americans to say Europe should abandon the highly civilized competition that prevails in most countries, in favor of the very uncomfortable form of competition we have in the United States.

HOWEVER, if Europe wishes to achieve the leap forward in productivity that it so desperately needs it seems to me that some shift, perhaps a considerable shift, is indicated. In my opinion, the degree of that shift will determine the extent of European improvement.

The free people of Europe and the United States must stick together and work together—and, if necessary, defend together their freedom.

Above all, we must preserve and strengthen our free societies. From the standpoint of significance to our children and to our grandchildren, nothing we can do can compare with the importance of maintaining and extending freedom in this world.

To my mind, business management, both abroad and in the United States, must so manage its enterprises that they will give strength to our free societies, upon which the material, intellectual and spiritual progress of mankind depends. If we so manage our business enterprises that they do contribute to the twin causes of justice and freedom, we cannot fail to have done our best for ourselves, our countries and mankind.

Congressional Quiz

Q—I notice Congress recently put a tax on betting and book-making. Does that mean that Congress considers gambling to be legal?

A—No. The Senate finance committee reported the new tax law "specifically provides" that payment of the tax on bets and bookies will not exempt gamblers from penalties if they break laws pertaining to gambling. "While federal law imposes no general prohibition upon gambling," the committee pointed out, "various forms of wagering are illegal under the laws of most states."

Q—How is our atomic bomb program coming along?

A—The Senate-House committee on atomic energy in its annual report said Oct. 19 that were an enemy to attack this nation now, the U.S. could deliver a "swift sure and terrible . . . atomic counter-blow." But it recommended that "greater boldness" be brought to bear on the program and asked the Atomic Energy Commission and the Defense Department to report to Congress next January on how the U.S. could "maximize" atomic production.

Q—Who decides on a new Republican floor leader to succeed the late Senator Kenneth S. Wherry?

A—The Senate Republican Conference, made up of all G.O.P. Senators, when it meets in 1952 will decide on Wherry's successor as minority floor leader. Meanwhile, Senator Leverett Saltonstall, who as minority "whip" holds the position of assistant floor leader, will act until the post is filled.

Q—How much does the government pay out on subsidies?

A—A Congressional Quarterly survey shows the government no longer reports the cost of subsidies, as such. Before it discontinued the practice, the Budget Bureau figured 1934-1948 subsidies cost nearly $15,000,000,000 for aid to agriculture, shipping and mines.

It Promises To Be Bigger Than Ever Next Year

Truman Takes Defensive on Clean-Up

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON PRESIDENT TRUMAN had an opportunity to strike while the iron was hot—to reflect the indignation of the country over the tax scandals. But he chose instead to adopt at his press conference a defensive mood—the same attitude which he has exhibited often in the past toward charges of wrongdoing leveled at his appointees.

The President has promised a new "clean-up" plan. Until he was ready to announce it, he would have been better advised not to argue the merits of the criticism that has been directed at various persons in his administration. The hint he has given that he will set up a special agency to ferret out corruption in the government and that it will be an agency of the executive branch of the government reporting to him will inevitably arouse suspicion that Mr. Truman wants to control such an investigating and prosecuting process.

BUT IN ALL probability what is bothering Mr. Truman is the difficulty of punishing wrongdoing when there have been indiscretions and improprieties that are not actual violations of law. It isn't a violation of law to mingle socially with persons who ask favors from the government. In fact, it isn't unlawful to let persons of influence come to government offices and give them time to discuss tax cases or anything else.

But it is, of course, improper, and where there is a question of failure to prosecute where wrong doing or tax frauds have been involved, neglect of duty is plain. Inefficiency and stupidity, however, and even failure to do a duty are not in themselves a violation of law that can be proved in a court and conviction obtained. These cases call for removal or dismissal, but they do not necessarily permit prosecution.

So when Mr. Truman talks of setting up a special agency with a board or commission of prominent men, he is thinking no doubt not only of some way to bring about prosecutions where there has been wrongdoing but of a way to ferret out the much larger group of persons who have been engaged in unethical, though lawful conduct.

SUCH AN INQUIRY, if applied to the whole government, would take months, if not years, to get going. What is important to the Democratic administration is that something be done to offset the bad impression being created daily by the headlines and dispatches reporting the testimony before the congressional investigating committees.

When Congress, through the House Un-American Activities Committee, exposed Communism inside the government, Mr. Truman set up a loyalty review board and departmental loyalty boards in response to a congressional mandate. He has hinted that he has something of the same kind of machinery in mind with respect to recent scandals.

But the Congress will have something to say about all this if the proposal is not satisfactory to public opinion. It would not seem plausible for the President to appoint a commission with power to investigate the White House itself, for instance, nor does it seem likely that such a commission would want the job of examining all the activities of officials with access to the White House and how they have performed their duties.

So, all in all, the proposed commission will probably have a limited task. The President evidently has determined to fight it out as if it were just another political battle and to point to the proposed board or committee or commission as an answer to those who feel that the administration should do something to clean house.

MR. TRUMAN is ready to prosecute anyone who has been guilty of law violation and he is ready to fire anyone proved to be engaging in activities outside the government that are of a compromising nature. But he isn't ready to fire political associates just because of the innuendoes contained in congressional testimony. Whether he can get away with such an attitude politically, and whether he has taken the very course that will insure headlines harmful to his party all through the campaign months of 1952, remains to be seen. But that's the risk Mr. Truman has assumed.

From Our Readers

Cites Dangers of U. M. T.

Editor, The News: At this season of the year, all of us will hear many times the loved and oft-repeated words, "Peace on Earth, goodwill to men." We may even speak these words several times ourselves, but what do we do to actually bring about that much hoped for condition?

We are busy with making or buying gifts for our family and our friends and are conscientious about doing our bit in charitable giving, but how much do we give of our time and our talents toward that coveted condition of which the Angels sang on that historic night when the Babe was born in Bethlehem?

We say "What can I do?" Right now is a time when each of us can exercise our democratic privilege of helping make the laws of our country. A momentous question hangs waiting to be decided when Congress convenes early in January.

It is a question of how our Nation will use its great power—whether to strengthen genuine democracy or to re-establish the authority of militarism over all men. It is the question of permanent Universal Training. If such a law is made it will be effective not only during an emergency but for all time. It will be an expensive program costing in its first year alone nearly as much as is spent on all primary and secondary education for all youths between 5 and 17 years of age, numbering thirty times the total of U. M. T. trainees.

Neither can this plan be hoped to be a preventative of war. If it were, Europe with all its military training would be the most peaceful spot in the world instead of a seed-bed of two world wars.

The Columbus Dispatch declared in an editorial on November 3rd, 1951, that "Universal Military Training—a conscription would be a better term—has made two wars possible in this century."

U. M. T. would not only imper-

rupt the education and training for life of our young men but would subject them to many temptations and endanger their morals at a time when youth should be under the influence of home and church.

What we all want is Peace—then why not bend our efforts to train youth for peace instead of for war?

This is a thing that concerns us all. Even the parents of the little baby sleeping snugly in his basket, or the little fellow gayly pedaling his tricycle, fathers and mothers yet to be—all who are interested in posterity, may some day sorrowfully to themselves "Why did we allow this undemocratic thing to become a law in our good old U.S.A.?"

We can, and should discuss this in our church groups, in our clubs and business organizations, in our rural groups and possibly send a delegation to visit one or all of our Congressmen while they are at home. We can write them our views even if we have told them many times before. Fortunately for us, we still live in a Democracy where the voice of the people speaks. Let's use our precious privilege.

Jeep Problem

BRUSSELS—One of the toughest standardization problems that European armies are trying to solve is on jeeps. There are now five different kinds of jeeps being manufactured, and none of them has completely interchangeable parts with the original American models.

A contract to assemble 2,500 jeeps in a Belgian factory has just been let. It will use components shipped in from the U.S., Britain and France, with a few small parts made in Belgium.

Diners' Club

By HAL BOYLE

Agency Pays Clients' Tabs

NEW YORK IT IS ALWAYS interesting to learn how and where people get million-dollar ideas. You might find out how to get one yourself.

But who ever got one in a restaurant chair after finding he had left his wallet at home?

Well, Frank McNamara did less than two years ago. "I had to call up my wife," he recalled, "and it took her 45 minutes to drive over with my wallet."

During that time McNamara, who was in the commercial credit business, fell to thinking what a nuisance it was anyway to have to pay restaurant and hotel bills in cash.

The result was "The Diners' Club," which McNamara formed with his partner, Ralph Schneider.

IT ISSUES A CREDIT card to some 60,000 subscribers entitling them to charge flowers, food or liquor, or car care, at some 700 restaurants, hotels and car rental agencies throughout America. These firms send in the accounts to the Diners' Club, which pay them, and forwards its own round-up bill once a month to its clients.

The club charges the subscribers only $5 a year for this service, and makes its profit from a seven per cent raffle-off it gets from the restaurants and hotels on each account.

"It saves the customers the trouble of carrying around cash," said McNamara, "and it saves the restaurant owners a lot of bookkeeping and the bother of collecting bad debts."

"It's so simple that least 25 people have told me they had the same idea before me. But they didn't follow through."

It took a lot of hard work—and $250,000—to launch the idea. The club had only $1,200 in billings the first month. But last month they were over $700,000, and the club expects to hit a $1,000,000-a-month stride by spring. Next on its agenda is a deal to allow clients to charge air travel.

CREDIT LOSSES have averaged less than one per cent.

"Few people try to run out on food, hotel or travel bills," McNamara said. "It's only when you let them charge things they can't cash that you run into much difficulty."

One of the greatest advantages of the club, he says, is that it provides his clients—largely upper bracket business and professional people—with receipts to prove travel and entertainment expenses for income tax deduction purposes.

"The largest tab we've had was for a $25,000 party thrown by a business firm in Los Angeles," he said, "but we have at least 50 members whose monthly charges come to $1,000 to $1,500."

"But in this business you can expect anything. We've got one member whose only charge each month is for chocolate sodas."

A woman member once wrote in she was deducting fifty cents from her monthly bill, and exclaimed:

"The string beans were cold in that place I dined in Connecticut."

THE SONGS OF CHRISTMAS

It was many years before the lovely carol, "Silent Night, Holy Night," came into its own. Roving choral groups carried it to other parts of Austria. Not until 1842, twenty-four years after its birth, was it printed.
